The project „living in a flower“ at Gartenstrasse and Lettenweg fits into the existing open development. The floor plans of the apartment buildings and the family house take on the form of flowers. In the environment, these act as a light structure. The reflection of the glass is supposed to integrate the environment into the new construction volume and make it appear as transparent as flowers.

Horizontal bands classify the architecture, emphasizing the individual floors, and give the homes an orderly, harmonious picture. The facades are designed with large windows, combined with closed window panels. This combination allows both spacious living as well as space for personal space indoors.

The sensitive architecture allows the residential development a stylish scale and a unique aesthetic.

The living areas are equipped with generous sliding windows, which provide a greater relation to the terraces or balconies.

The large windows combined with optimal thermal protection values (triple glazing) offer both comfortable as well as spacious living. Both the reflection of the windows as well as the user-friendly reefing blinds with flexible slats offer the new residents great freedom to ensure privacy.
